Baltimore Lock Hospital.

DR. JOHNSTON,

Physician of this celebrated Institution, has discovered the most Certain, Speedy, Pleasant and Effectual Remedy in the World for

DISEASES OF IMPRUDENCE,

Weakness of the Back, or Limbs, Strictures, Affections of the Kidneys, or Bladder, Involuntary Discharges, Impotency, General Debility, Nervousness, Dyspepsia, Languor, Low Spirits, Confusion of Ideas, Palpitation of the Heart, Timidity, Trembling, Dimness of Sight, or Giddiness, Disease of the Head, Throat, Nose or Skin, Affection of the Liver, Lungs, Stomach or Bowels. Those terrible disorders arising from Solitary Habits of Youth—secret and solitary practices, more fatal to their victims than the songs of the Syrens to the Mariners of Ulysses, blighting their most brilliant hopes, or anticipations, rendering marriage, &c., impossible.

YOUNG MEN

especially who have become the Victims of Solitary Vice, that dreadful and destructive habit which annually sweeps to an untimely grave thousands of young men of the most exalted talents and brilliant intellect, who might otherwise have entranced listening Senates with the thunders of eloquence, or waked to ecstasy the living lyre, may call with full confidence.

MARRIAGE.

Married persons, or Young Men contemplating marriage, aware of Physical Weakness, Loss of Procreative Power—Impotency, Nervous Excitability, Palpitation, Organic Weakness, Nervous Debility, or any other disqualification, speedily relieved.

He who places himself under the care of Dr. J. may religiously confide in his honor as a gentleman, and confidently rely upon his skill as a physician.

ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

IMPOTENCY, LOSS OF POWER,

Immediately cured, and Full Vigor restored. This distressing affliction—which renders life miserable and marriage impossible—is the penalty paid by the victims of improper indulgence. Young persons are too apt to commit excesses from not being aware of the dreadful consequences that may ensue. Now, who that understands the subject will pretend to deny that the power of procreation is lost sooner by those falling into improper habits than by the prudent? Besides being deprived of the pleasures of healthy offspring, the most serious and destructive symptoms of both body and mind arise. The system becomes deranged, the Physical and Mental Functions Weakened, Loss of Procreative Power, Nervous Irritability, Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Constitutional Debility, and Wasting of the Frame, Cough, Consumption, Decay and Death.

A CURE WARRANTED IN TWO DAYS.

Relief in Six Hours! No Mercury!

Persons ruined in Health by unlearned Pretenders who keep them trifling month after month ... by Persons ...

DR. JOHNSTON,

Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, London. Graduated from one of the most eminent Colleges in the United States, and the greater part of whose life has been spent in the Hospitals of London, Paris, Philadelphia and elsewhere, has effected some of the most astonishing cures that were ever known; many troubled with ringing in the head and ears when asleep, great nervousness, being alarmed at sudden sounds, bashfulness, with frequent blushing, attended sometimes with derangement of mind, were cured immediately.

TAKE PARTICULAR NOTICE.

Dr. J. addresses all those who have injured themselves by improper indulgence and solitary habits, which ruin both body and mind, unfitting them for either business, study, society or marriage.

These are some of the sad and melancholy effects produced by early habits of youth, viz: Weakness of the Back and Limbs, Pains in the Head, Dimness of Sight, Loss of Muscular Power, Palpitation of the Heart, Dyspepsia, Nervous Irritability, Derangement of the Digestive Functions, General Debility, Symptoms of Consumption, &c.

MENTALLY—The fearful effects on the mind are much to be dreaded—Loss of Memory, Confusion of Ideas, Depression of Spirits, Evil Forebodings, Aversion to Society, Self Distrust, Love of Solitude, Timidity, &c., are some of the evils produced.

Thousands of persons of all ages can now judge what is the cause of their declining health, losing their vigor, becoming weak, pale, nervous and emaciated, having a singular appearance about the eyes, cough and symptoms of consumption.

who have injured themselves by a certain practice, indulged in when alone, a habit frequently learned from evil companions, or at school, the effects of which are nightly felt, even when asleep, and if not cured, renders marriage impossible, and destroys both mind and body, should apply immediately.

What a pity that a young man, the hope of his country, the pride of his parents, should be snatched from all prospects and enjoyments of life, by the consequences of deviating from the path of nature and indulging in a certain secret habit. Such persons must, before contemplating reflect that a sound mind and body are the most necessary requisites to promote connubial happiness. Indeed without these, the journey through life becomes a weary pilgrimage; the prospect hourly darkens to the view; the mind becomes shadowed with despair and filled with the melancholy reflection that the happiness of another is blighted with our own.

DISEASE OF IMPRUDENCE.

When the misguided and imprudent votary of pleasure finds that he has imbibed the seeds of this painful disease, it too often happens that an ill-timed sense of shame or dread of discovery deters him from applying to those who, from education and respectability, can alone befriend him, delaying till the constitutional symptoms of this horrid disease make their appearance, such as ulcerated sore throat, diseased nose, nocturnal pains in the head and limbs, dimness of sight, deafness, nodes on the shin bones and arms, blotches on the head, face and extremities, progressing with frightful rapidity, till at last the palate of the mouth or the bones of the nose fall in, and the victim of this awful disease becomes a horrid object of commiseration, till death puts a period to his dreadful sufferings, by sending him to "that Undiscovered Country from whence no traveler returns."

It is a melancholy fact, that thousands fall victims to this terrible disease, through falling into the hands of ignorant or unskillful PRETENDERS, who by the use of that Deadly Poison, Mercury, &c., destroy the constitution, and incapable of curing, keep the unhappy sufferer month after month taking their noxious or injurious compounds, and instead of being restored to a renewal of life, Vigor and Happiness, in despair leave him with ruined Health, to sigh over his galling disappointment.

To such, therefore, Dr. JOHNSTON pledges himself to preserve the most inviolable Secrecy, and from his extensive practice and observations in the great hospitals of Europe, and the first in this country, viz: England, France, Philadelphia and elsewhere, is enabled to offer the most Speedy, Certain and Effectual Remedy in the World for all diseases of Imprudence.

OFFICE 7 SOUTH FREDERICK STREET,

BALTIMORE, MD.,

Left hand side going from Baltimore street, a few doors from the corner. Fail not to observe name and number.

No letters received unless post paid and containing a stamp to be used on the reply. Persons writing should state age, and send a portion of advertisement describing symptoms.

There are many Paltry, Designing and Worthless Imposters advertising themselves as Physicians, trifling with and ruining the health of all who unfortunately fall into their power, that Dr. Johnson deems it necessary to say especially to those unacquainted with his reputation that his Credentials or Diplomas always hang in his office.

ENDORSEMENT OF THE PRESS.

The many thousands cured at this establishment, year after year, and the numerous important Surgical Operations performed by Dr. Johnston, witnessed by the representatives of the press and many other persons, notices of which have appeared again and again before the public, besides his standing as a gentleman of character and responsibility, is a sufficient guarantee to the afflicted.

Miscellaneous.

GREEN GRASS UNDER THE SNOW.

The work of the sun is slow,
But sure as heaven, we know;
So we'll not forget,
When the skies are wet,
There's green grass under the snow.

When the winds of winter blow,
Wailing like voices of woe,
There are April showers,
And buds and flowers,
And green grass under the snow.

We'll find that it's ever so
In this life's uneven flow;
We've only to win,
In the grace of late
For the green grass under the snow.

BEND THE TWIG WHEN GREEN.

There was once upon a time as old wives used to say a husband and wife, who had brought up three daughters, respectfully named Karen, Maren and Metty.

They might certainly have been reckoned very pretty had people not known them to be all three as quite stubborn and contradictory, and desirous of having the last word. Metty was far the most agreeable. By dint of time there came two wooers for the two eldest daughters, who finished by marrying.

But it was years before anybody ventured to make up to Metty. At last, however, even she had a sweetheart. It is true that he came from a long distance. The banns were to be published three times, and on the third after such publication, which had been fixed at an out-of-the way hour by the bridegroom, he and Metty were to meet in church in order to be married. When these particulars were settled the man, who was an odd fellow, at once took his departure.

On the wedding day, the old parents had made their appearance at church with their daughter. But they had a long time to wait for the bridegroom. At last he appeared, mounted on an old gray horse, with a musket slung across his breast, a pair of worsted gloves on his hands, and a large dog at his heels.

No sooner was the marriage ceremony over than he said to his bride: "Jump on that horse, and place yourself before me, that we may return home."

She did so, although her father raised a number of objections. He could have wished that the newly made pair had entered his house first of all, to eat something. But the new husband would not hear of any such thing, and they went their ways.

When they had gone tolerably far the husband let fall one of his gloves.

"Pick it up," said he to the dog; but the animal let it lie, for anything he cared.

"Pick it up, instantly!" repeated he; but again the dog did not stir.

After having commanded him a third time to do what he bad bid him, but with no better success, and without the dog's seeming to care a farthing for his commands, the man took up his gun and shot him dead on the spot.

They then went their ways, and reached a wood, where the husband had a mind to take some rest. Our travelers, accordingly, got off their horse, and put the bridle on his neck. When the man thought they were sufficiently rested, he called his horse three times; but the animal took no notice of his master's voice, and went on grazing. On seeing this, the husband took up his gun once more and killed the disobedient horse. On witnessing this sight the wife felt strangely uneasy; and while continuing her road, determined, come what might, never to contradict her husband.

Shortly after, he took up a green twig, and folded it so that the two ends would meet, and presented it to his wife, bidding her keep it till he asked to have it back. The newly married pair then followed their road on foot and arrived without further accident at their farmhouse.

Here they lived very happily, for Metty had not forgotten the resolution she had taken in the woods never to contradict her husband. She always appeared so gentle and docile that nobody could have suspected that she was the intractable Metty. Now this is what her husband said to her one day: "Should we not go and see your father, Metty, to ascertain how he and your good old mother are by this time?"

The wife declared that nothing could please her better; accordingly, the husband ordered the horses to be harnessed, and off they went. Toward evening they had overtaken a flock of storks all journeying together.

"What a quantity of crows!" said the man.

"They are not crows, but storks," said the woman.

"Turn the chaise round and take us back home," was the order the husband gave to his servant.

They accordingly returned from whence they came.

Some time after the husband again asked his wife if she did not long to see her aged parents.

Of course Metty wished it heartily. On the road they met a flock of sheep.

"What a large flock of wolves," cried the husband.

"They are not wolves," observed the wife, "but sheep."

"Turn round the cart and take us home," ordered the husband of the servant. And this was accordingly done.

A third time the farmer asked his wife if they ought not pay a visit to her old parents, and as she acquiesced eagerly, the old horses were once more harnessed. They had gone over a deal of ground, when they met a flock of hens.

"What a quantity of crows," said the husband.

"Quite true," said the wife.

This time they did not turn back, and when they reached the dwelling of the old folks then there was great rejoicing. Karen and Maren likewise came with their husbands. The mother took her three daughters into the room, for she was very curious to question Metty as to her mode of living, and to know whether she was satisfied with her husband. During this interval, the father kept filling a large jar full of silver coins, which he placed on the table before his sons in law, saying it would belong with its contents to the woman who was the most obedient.

On hearing this, the eldest began to cry out: "Karen, my beloved; come hither for a moment—come, my dearest Karen." But all his appeals were lost upon Karen. Even when he went into their bedroom, and began to urge her, with a kind of gentle violence, he could not make her stir.

The second husband fared no better with his Maren.

It was now the third husband's turn. He merely went to the door, knocked, and said: "Come here, Metty."

Out she came in a moment, and inquired whether he wanted anything.

He answered: "Merely the sprig which I gave into your keeping when we were in the wood on our wedding day."

She gave it to him at once, as she always carried it in her pocket. Then the husband showed it to the others, saying: "Behold! I bent this branch while it was still green—you ought to have done the same!"

THE following story is related at Machias, Maine:

More than a year ago a lady in the above city, while "starting up" a straw bed, lost a ring from her finger. Strict search was made, but the ring could not be found. The straw was emptied in the spring in the stable, and used as bedding for horses, and thrown upon the manure heap; the manure was hauled about three miles and used on a potato lot. The crop of potatoes was dug and cellared, and as the man was cutting some of them to feed his horses his knife struck upon some hard substance, which on investigation, proved to be the identical ring lost in the straw bed more than a year previous.

A LESSON IN ARITHMETIC.—A applied to B for a loan of $100. B replied: "My dear A, nothing would please me better than to oblige you, and I will do it. I haven't $100 by me, but make a note and I'll endorse it, and you can get the money from the bank." Grateful A proceeded at once to write the note. "Stay," said B, "make it $200, I want $100 myself." A did so, B indorsed the paper, the bank discounted it, and the money was divided. When the note was due B was in California and A had to meet the payment. What he is unable to cipher out is whether he borrowed $100 of B, or B borrowed $100 of him.

ARSENE HOUSSAYE tells of a plebeian who went to Rothschild to borrow $2,000. "Here it is," said the Baron, "but remember that as a rule I only lend to crowned heads." M. De Rothschild never dreamed of seeing his money again, but, wonderful to relate, at the end of a month the borrower came back with his $2,000. The baron could scarcely believe his eyes; but he foreboded that this was not the end. Sure enough, the borrower a month later reappeared, asking for the loan of $4,000. "No, no," said the baron; "you disappointed me once by paying me that money. I do not want to be disappointed again."

IN some parts of the world the women are forbidden to wash themselves more than once in a lifetime, and that is when they are about to marry. On the other hand, there are women, and men, too, in this country who appear to think a daily cold water plunge bath indispensable to robust health. In a few cases this daily laving of the body in cold water may have the effect of rendering those who practice it more hardy, but in the opinion of some excellent physicians it sends ten to the grave for every one whose physical condition it improves.

THE editor of the Reading Eagle makes strange investigations sometimes and seeks for information where more modest newspaper men would not dare to go. Witness the following in regard to stockings: "The Circassian girl in this city shows a pair of stockings that she says she made entirely out of her own hair. They are thick, heavy and soft, and seem to be of pure hair. The upper ends are secured with scarlet worsted work. The stockings were knit while she was on exhibition at Barnum's museum."

A GENTLEMAN who was seated in a crowded horse car on the Sixth avenue, resigned his place in favor of a pale slender woman, who carried a large child in her arms, and was being jostled this way and that with the motion of the car. To the gentleman's surprise, a burly individual took the seat before the lady could reach it.

"I meant this lady to have my seat," said the gentleman angrily.

"Vell," replied the other, settling comfortably back in his seat, "dot lady ish my vife!"

A RESIDENT who reached Detroit by a noon train lately, after an absence of two weeks, was met at the depot by his eight year old son, who loudly welcomed him. "And is everybody well, Willie?" asked the father. "The wellest kind," replied the boy. "And nothing has happened?" "Nothing at all. I've been good and Jennie's been good, and I never saw ma behave herself so well as she has this time!"

A "MIXED" STONE CUTTER.

The widow Smyth called at Mr. Mix's marble yard the other day, and the following conversation ensued:

"Mr. Mix, I am anxious to have my cemetery lot fixed up; to put in new tombstones and reset the railing; and I called to see if I could make some satisfactory arrangement with you."

"Certainly, madame. Tell me precisely what it is you want done."

"Well, I'd like to have a new tombstone put over the grave of John—my husband, you know—and to have a nice inscription cut on it. 'Here lies John Smyth,' etc., etc. You know what I mean; the usual way, of course, and maybe some kind of a design on the stone like a broken rosebud or something."

"I understand," replied Mr. Mix.

"Well, then, what'll you charge me for getting up a headstone just like that, out of pretty good white marble, and with a little picture of a torch upside down or a weeping angel on it, and the name of Thomas Smyth cut on it?"

"John Smyth, you mean?"

"No, I mean Thomas."

"But you said John before," insisted Mr. Mix.

"I know, but that was my first husband, and Thomas was my second, and I want a new headstone for each of them. Now it seems to me, Mr. Mix, that where a person is buying more than one that way, you ought to make some reduction in the price—throw something off, though I want a pretty good article at all the graves. Not anything gorgeous, but neat and tasteful, and calculated to please the eye. Mr. Smyth was not a man who was fond of show. Give him a thing comfortable and he was satisfied. Now, which do you think is the prettiest, to have the name in raised letters in a straight line over the top of the stone or just to cut the words, 'Alexander P. Smyth,' in a kind of semi circle in sunken letters?"

"Did I understand you to say Alexander P.? Were you referring to John or Thomas?" asked Mix.

"Of course not. Aleck was my third. I'm not going to neglect his grave while I'm fixing up the rest. I wish to make a complete job of it, Mr. Mix, while I am about it, and I'm willing for you to undertake it if you are reasonable in your charges. Now what'll you ask me for the lot, the kind I've described, plain but substantial, and sunk about two feet I should think, at the head of each grave? What'll you charge me for them—the whole four?"

"Well, I'll put you in those three headstones—"

"Four headstones, Mr. Mix, not three," interrupted Mrs. Smyth.

"Four, was it? No, there was John, and Thomas, and Alexander P. That's all you said, I think. Only three."

"Why I want one for Adolph too—as a matter of course; the same as the others. I thought you knew that I wanted one for Adolph, one made just like John's only with the name different. Adolph was my fourth husband. He died about three years after I buried Philip, and I'm wearing mourning for him now. Now, please give me your prices for the whole of them."

"Well, madame, I want to be as reasonable as I can, and I tell you what I'll do. You give me all your work in the future and I'll put you in those five headstones at hardly anything above cost, say—"

"Four headstones; not five," said Mrs. Smyth.

"I think you mentioned five."

"No, only four."

"Let's see; there was John, and Thomas, and Aleck, and Adolph and Phillip."

"Yes, but Aleck and Phillip were the same one. His middle name was Phillip, and I always called him Phil."

"Well," said Mr. Mix.

"Mrs. Smyth, I'll be much obliged to you if you'll tell me precisely how many husbands you have planted up in that cemetery lot. This thing's getting a little mixed."

"What do you mean, sir, by saying 'planted?' I never planted anybody. It's disgraceful to use such language," indignantly snapped out Mrs. Smyth.

"It's a technical term, madame. We always use it and I don't see as it's going to hurt an old row of corpses named Smyth. Planted is good enough for other men, and it's good enough for them."

"Old row of——what'd you mean, you impudent vagabond? I wouldn't let you put a headstone on one of my graves if you'd do it for nothing."

Then Mrs. Smyth flounced out of the shop, and Mix called after her as she went through the door:

"Lemme know when you go for another man, and I'll throw him in a tombstone for a wedding present. He'll want it."

Mrs. Smyth is now looking at headstones in a marble yard at Wilmington.

A DEAD SHOT.—Frank Frayne is now performing the feat of shooting an apple off his wife's head. He performs it nightly at the New Chicago Theatre. Some persons thought it simply a clever trick of legerdemain; but it is really a triumph of marksmanship. Recently Mr. Frayne gave a private exhibition of his skill before a select committee consisting of members of the press and a number of experts. Mr. Fred Knight, a member of the company, was selected to hold the apple on his head and stand quiet under fire. Frank Frayne loaded his rifle—a Stevens, made at Chicopee Falls, Mass.—and he made that piece of fruit fly into a thousand pieces. Then he repeated the experiment, this time firing backward over his soulder, and taking his aim by means of a small mirror. There could be no doubt as to the reality of the shooting; the only wonder was that the young man shot at could calmly stand without flinching.

HANDY.—A Danbury couple have a nice little daughter of some five summers. A lady visitor lately remarked to the mother, "What a pretty child you have! She must be a great comfort to you." "She is, indeed," said the fond mother. "When I am mad at John, I don't have to speak to him. She calls him to his meals, and tells him to get up the coal, and other things that I want. She's real handy."

THERE was a hard-up man in Louisville the other day trying to sell, as a valuable relic, a three cent postage stamp which he declared was from one of Paul's letters to the Corinthians.

NOT THAT COLUMBUS.

The bootblack at the corner stand on C street was looking for a customer. He was as black as the ace of spades, and as he carelessly dusted off his stand with the stump of a corn brush he occasionally paused and rolled his eyes hungrily up and down the street.

Presently a tall, raw-boned, middle-aged man, with a considerable length of a goatee and not a little breadth of hat rim, stopped and glanced at the stand with much interest.

"Have a shine, boss?" said the owner of the stand, giving his chair a parting slap with his brush.

Without designing to answer, the lank chap climbed into the seat before him.

"Do people of de Souf," said the bootblack, "most allus give us pore culled boys any little feasible jobs dey's got."

"You think I'm from the South?"

"Sartin, boss, I's from Lex'nton, Kaintuck, sah."

"I'm from Kentucky myself, and from Lexington," said the man, beginning to look interested.

"Jess so, boss. Practically I was born dar, sah."

"Like you, I was born thar."

"I say, boss, practically you happend to know a culled boy Columbus Parsons, as lived out on de road to'ard whar ole Harry Clay was borned out to'ard Ashland did yer, sah?"

"I knowed a colored boy named Columbus Parsons, that rode old Woodpecker against Ploughboy, down at the Blue Grass course, and won the puss."

"De Lord love us! Was dat you? De great hokey! Practically, I am dat same Columbus Parsons, what rode ole Woodpecker, and won de puss down dar to Blue Grass!"

"The Columbus Parsons I knowed used to be a great fiddler; played for all the balls and parties for miles around."

"Dat was me, sah. I was de boy. Now you's a beginnin' to know me."

"The Columbus Parsons I used to know was a great singer—was lightnin' at all nigger camp meetin's."

"Dat was me, boss. I'm identically and practically dat same Columbus Parsons. You's got de most feasible memory I ever saw, sah."

"The Columbus Parsons I knowed went down to Frankford and ran on the river as steward of the Bell Wagner."

"Yah, yah! You knows me, boss! You knows me like a brudder, sah! In dem days didn't I put on the apparel? Wasn't I attired? Practically, sah, you's got de most feasible mem'ry dat I ever saw!"

"The Columbus Parsons that I knowed, the Columbus Parsons that rode ole Woodpecker, the Columbus Parsons that used to sing at camp meetin's, the Columbus Parsons that was steward on the Bell Wagner, that Columbus Parsons busted open the trunk of a passenger, stole a thousand dollars, and was sent to the State Prison at Frankfort for five years."

"Practically, boss. You's got a powerful feasible memory, but dare was another Columbus Parsons down dare 'bout Lexin'ton and Frankfort—particularly South Frankfort, 'cross de chain bridge dat was a hoss rider, a fiddler, a singer and a steamboater, and was a low flung, harem scarum, no account feller. I guess he mus a bin de Columbus Parsons what you knowed, sah."

"You think so?"

"Sartin, sure, boss; but don't say nuffin 'bout de feller heah, sah. You see, practically, it mout injure my good name, sah!"—Virginia Enterprise.

WHAT EGYPT WILL EXHIBIT.—Curious Exhibits from the Land of the Pharaohs.—The Khedive is the owner of most of the Egyptian goods for the centennial exhibition, all of which have arrived at New York. The catalogue contains over 6,000 numbers. The best specimens of the agricultural products are from the Khedive's estates. In the collection are curious weapons and ornaments from the barbarous tribes of the remote regions of Central Africa; jewels, inlaid work in ivory, precious metals, rich embroideries, produced by the Arabian artists of Cairo; a classified collection of the products of the valley of the Nile, the oases of the sea coasts; 2,500 specimens of the cotton crops for the last eighty years, showing the prices brought in Alexandria and in Liverpool; raw and refined sugar; grains of all kinds, hemp, flax, doura, vetch, sorghum, lentils, poppy seeds and ramie; all the woods of Egypt, in sections of trees, polished on one side; dates, olives and other preserved fruit; tobacco, indigo, chemical preparations, perfumery, Arabian honey, specimens of marble and building stones, jeweled cimeters, saddles of embroidered leather and mounted with gold, agricultural implements of the most inconceivable patterns, books for the blind, and drawings by the pupils in the polytechnic school. By way of contrast will be shown, side by side, ancient papyrus and the modern newspaper; hippopotamus hide and calfskin; chibouk and nargileh and the Parisian cigarette, and European porcelain and ancient red pottery. This enumeration is not a complete one, as there is also a world of curious things from Soudan, Darfour, Abyssinia and Uganda. The Khedive has appropriated 500,000 francs to defray the expenses of making the collection, transporting it to this country and paying the commissioners, all of whom are in New York. But that the time was too short after President Grant's invitation, the Khedive would have had a palace erected on the centennial grounds like the one he had at Vienna, illustrating the architecture and domestic life of the land of the Pharaohs.

A COUNTRYMAN saw for the first time a school girl going through some of her gymnastic exercises for the amusement of the little ones at home. After gazing at her with looks of interest and commiseration for a while, he asked a boy near by, "if that gal had fits?" "No," replied the lad, contemptuously, "that's gymnastics." "Oh, 'tis, hey?" said the verdant; "how long has she had 'em?"

A SCHOOL BOY had just got his face fixed to sing "Let us love one another," when a snow ball hit him in the mouth, and so confused him that he yelled, "Bill Sikes, just do that agin, and I'll chaw your ear off."

EARLY LOCAL HISTORY.

CONTINUED.

The Battle of Wyoming.

In the beautiful valley of Wyoming, several miles north of Wilkesbarre, on the western bank of the Susquehanna, stands a plain but massive monument, bearing the following inscription: "Near this spot was fought on the afternoon of Friday, the 3d day of July, 1778, THE BATTLE OF WYOMING, in which a small band of patriot Americans, chiefly the undisciplined, the youthful, and the aged, spared, by inefficiency, from the distant ranks of the Republic, led by Colonel Zebulon Butler and Colonel Nathan Denison, with a courage that deserved success, boldly met and bravely fought a combined British, Tory, and Indian force of thrice their number. Numerical superiority alone gave success to the invader, and widespread havoc, desolation and ruin marked his savage and bloody footsteps through the valley. This monument, commemorative of these events, and of the actors in them, has been erected over the bones of the slain by their descendants and others, who greatfully appreciate the service and sacrifices of their patriot ancestors."

Standing at the base of this monument, the visitor may gaze around upon a landscape of almost enchanting loveliness. No wonder, he thinks, that Indian tribes should be loath to leave a paradise like this. No wonder that early settlers, looking down upon it from the heights of some of the surrounding mountains, should, like Lot when he lifted up his eyes upon the well watered Jordan plain, regard this valley as the very garden of the Lord. Hither the distinguished Count Zinzendorf—probably the first white man that ever visited the place found his way in 1742, to bring the Gospel to the Indians. Hither came also, in 1762, a small colony of emigrants from Connecticut; but they were attacked by the savages, and expelled from the valley in less than two years thereafter. Subsequently other companions from Connecticut entered and settled in the valley, not, however, without a spirited opposition from numerous bands of Pennsylvanians. The fair valley was coveted by other American pioneers, and the long dispute between Pennsylvania and Connecticut over the right of soil was attended by other wars than those with Indians and Tories.

When, in 1776, the Revolutionary War was in progress, and the American Independence declared, the "Pennymite and Yankee War" was suspended by reason of the sterner conflict which shook the entire land. At that time the population of the Wyoming Valley was a little more than 2,000 souls. The Indian tribes took part with Great Britain against the colonies, and at once the Wyoming settlers had reason for alarm. Such an exposed frontier could scarcely hope to remain unmolested. The neighboring savages, who had been peaceably disposed, began to be insolent and show signs of hostility. Several most unwelcome settlers, of Tory affinities, located in the upper part of the valley, and every day the signs of danger and purposed evil became more and more apparent. Two companies of soldiers were enlisted for the defense of the settlement, but the gloom that overspread the American cause at the close of the year 1776 led the Continental Congress to order these companies to join General Washington with all possible expedition. Without hesitation, without a murmur, these troops, comprising the principal able bodied men of the settlement, marched away to the seat of war. All through the anxious months of 1777 the Wyoming colony was left in such a defenseless state. Burgoyne's invasion in the North east drew the attention of the Indians for the time to that quarter, but after the surrender of that General there was every reason to believe the dreaded footsteps of the savages would at once be turned toward this exposed frontier. Congress was apprized of the danger, but strangely failed to send the needed help. In the early spring of 1778 rumors of savage invasion became more and more alarming. At length, on the last day of June, a large body of British provincials, Tories, and Indians, (the last being most numerous,) under the command of Col. John Butler, took possession of the upper part of the valley. A council of war was called; and Col. Zebulon Butler, of the American army, then at home, took command. Some advised that the settlers should strengthen themselves in the fort, and maintain a defensive attitude until the absent militia should come to their help. Others were for attacking the enemy without delay, urging that their beautiful valley would soon be laid waste, and their harvests all destroyed. The counsels of the latter pervailed; but they were in ignorance of the strength of their foes. The enemy had been careful to conceal its number.

On the afternoon of Friday, the third of July, the Wyoming army, composed of about three hundred old men and boys, marched from the fort to meet with a vigilant and savage foe. To defeat and murder such an army, deficient in arms as well as inefficient by reason of the infirmities of age and the inexperience of youth noticeable in its ranks, would seem but a play-spell for the savage warriors, who alone were more than twice their number. Every step of their advance was watched, and when, about four o'clock in the afternoon, the fight began, their hapless ranks were flanked on right and left and by hosts of ambushed Indians. The fearful yell of savage warfare rent the air. From their hiding-places, the Indian marksmen coolly selected their victims. A galling fire on right and left and front soon threw the Wyoming companies into confusion, and an order for one company to wheel back and form an angle was mistaken for an order to retreat, and that one fatal word ran all along the line, and utter confusion prevailed. Col. Zebulon Butler rode up and down between opposing fires, to check the flight; but all in vain. The overwhelming numbers of the enemy made further effort idle, and disorderly flight and massacre began.

To the thickets, to the river, here and there, the survivors fled for their lives, closely pursued by the blood-thirsty savages whose hour of glory now had come. One sergeant was chased into the river, and, while struggling for life, was run through by a spear, and left to float away upon the water. THURSDAY, FEB 10 1876.

GEN BABCOCK'S trial commenced at St Louis on Monday Can Grant save him from conviction? The country will look on with interest.

OUR Democratic friends throughout the county must not forget that the elections for township and borough officers will be held on TUESDAY NEXT. These elections are important and every Democrat should go and vote.

THERE are five negro members of Congress Three of them, before the war, were unacquainted with the alphabet, and one of them served in the army and navy of the Confederacy and the Union, off and on, during the late unpleasantness

THE administration of the Government of the District of Columbia is now undergoing investigation, the House Committee having entered upon its duties by calling upon the Commissioners to step up to the Committee's rooms and answer certain questions in relation to their official acts Some rich developments are anticipated

As the [illegible] for Babcock's conviction increase the cry of rebel sympathizers is raised against St Louis jurymen This has been the way for fifteen years Whenever any person protested against or tried to arrest official stealing, the whole Republican press set up the cry of rebel sympathizer and "copperhead" and all the party bummers joined in the effort to drag him down

THE Indianapolis Sentinel says, "It would not surprise the country if Mr Grant should throw the entire weight of his social and political influence in favor of his secretary, and even if convicted, pardon him after Mr Grant has great facility for being excessively stupid at times, and this occasion may afford him an opportunity of sacrificing whatever fame he may have acquired as a statesman It would be better in him to pardon Babcock and then resign"

THE Harrisburg correspondent of the Pittsburgh Telegraph (Rep) says

The lobby that formerly infested the capitol building and hotels is a thing of the past The profession is obsolete—not that the people do not come here to influence legislation, they do, but they are generally the representatives of communities or important interests and their influence in the legislature is exerted in a proper and legitimate way by arguments before committees or printed statements addressed to members There are no sealed envelopes circulated

The personnel of the legislature, I think, will steadily improve hereafter until we get back to the same conditions that existed in the early history of the State This is no place for the smart rogues of a type that will readily suggest itself, who formerly made money by thousands by the most bold faced corruption They can do better elsewhere since the traffic in special privileges has been prohibited. The tendency is now steadily towards better things in legislation, it was formerly downward to the lowest depths of political and legislative immorality Legislative duties at the capitol now invite the co-operation of the best minds of the State, and afford a splendid training ground for young men honestly ambitious of a political career

THE Carlisle Mirror says that the Auditors of Cumberland county have concluded their investigations of the County Treasurer's office, and find the frauds perpetrated by him and his assistant to amount to about $5 000

And now," asks the Volunteer, "what shall be done with the men who in violation of the oath they took, and the moral obligation they assumed when they entered upon the discharge of the duties confided to them by the people of Cumberland county? What shall be done with them? Will a restitution of the amounts stolen, by forgeries, satisfy our people? Perhaps so and perhaps not A fatality appears to overhang our office of County Treasurer About every other Treasurer for the last twenty five years has had difficulties in settling his accounts This thing must stop and stop right here We have no sympathy, no patience with a county official who betrays his friends and his trust. And after this investigation is over and every dollar stolen from the county is returned to the County Treasury, then the County Commissioners—the guardians of our people—have a duty to perform"

NOTWITHSTANDING the numerous aspirants for the occupancy of the White House we question whether the average American citizen has a true appreciation of the comforts and luxuries which pertain to that position In the discussion of the constitutional amendment limiting Presidents to one term, Hon J Proctor Knott, who had the amendment in charge, thus pictured the allurements of the Presidential office

A salary of $50 000, a mansion sustained in a style of luxury that few persons dreamed of, furnished, repaired and heated at an annual expense of $25 000, with the very air breathed there perfumed by rare exotics propagated in a $50 000 garden house maintained at an annual expense of $5 000, a private secretary at $3 000 a year to do the President's writing, two assistant secretaries at $2 500 a year to do the work of the private secretary two clerks at $2,250 to do the work of the assistant secretaries a steward at $2 000 to supply the President's table with the choicest wines and the richest viands that could tempt or satiate his appetite with $6 000 a year for books, periodicals stationery telegrams and other contingencies" If the children of Israel sighed for the flesh pots of Egypt, what must be the anguish of a sensitive soul when taking a last long farewell of such salary and luxuries?

GENERAL NOTES — The Tribune thinks the Republican leaders in the House are on the wrong tack

— The Patriot suggests that all owning homes or farms should plant centennial trees next spring

— The Virginia Republican office holders have declared for Blaine Here is a chance for Mosby Let him go in for a third term and turn them all out

— Short one for Tom Scott' He has returned to the city of Philadelphia $2 514 34 the excess of the contract price of the Market Street bridge over its actual cost

— Democrats go to the spring Elections next Tuesday A full vote will show a good account

Both Morton and Conkling are according to general opinion in favor of a third term, if they cannot be nominated themselves

— Neither is Pierrepont [illegible] a little

We wish [illegible] hundred thousand dollars as we are that Blaine won't be nominated for President — Watchman

— There is a newspaper rumor that the Tribune will soon come out for Blaine Jay Gould now owns it

THE Mississippi river is eating its way across the county above Cairo to join waters with the Ohio, and by next year Cairo will be surrounded by water as well as by the meanest smells on earth.

WASHINGTON LETTER

The Retrenchment Measures of the House—Where the Saving is to be Made—Morton's Health and His Speech—Trouble Between Grant and Bristow—The New Tariff

Correspondence of the Compiler

WASHINGTON, Feb 5 1876.

When Congress assembled it was given out that one of the leading purposes of the Democratic majority would be to inaugurate and carry out a policy of retrenchment in keeping with the times For a series of years the Republican party has had full control of the Government, and has administered its affairs with a loose and lavish hand until extravagance, theft, and all manner of corruption have cast a burden upon the people almost greater than they can bear The natural and inevitable result was a financial panic, followed by a continued depression of business which, in the language of General Banks, "is taking from men their property from laborers their employment, and from women and children their bread, destroying not only the welfare of the present, but imperilling the hopes of the future" Never until the people began to rise up and repudiate them did the Republicans take one step towards reform Last year however, they read the handwriting on the wall and cast out a sop They did actually reduce the appropriations five or six millions, and claim great credit for it, when the reduction should have been ten times as great

Of course, it would not be possible for the Democrats in one session, and with the control of only one branch of the law-making power, to correct all these evils But they said we will stop the steals, and retrench Mr Randall Mr Holman, and other experienced leaders said a reduction of forty millions could be effected. To this end the Committee on Appropriations has been earnestly at work and their labors promise to bring about the desired result It was anticipated that some opposition would be met from the Republicans if for no other reason, to prevent so wide a contrast between their work and that of the Democratic House, but the power to defeat the reduction rests alone with the Senate, if the Republican majority there dare exercise it

No precise estimate of the amount of reduction likely to be accomplished can be made at this time The military academy bill has already passed, reducing the pay of cadets from $500 to $450, and the pay of professors 20 per cent a total saving of $80 000 per annum The cadets have rations, quarters etc, furnished them, so that no hardship is entailed, as was represented in the debate. The cadets are now allowed more than it costs to support students at any college or university in the country, and the lopping off is only justice to over burdened tax payers Yet the Republicans opposed the bill to a man The fortification bill has been finished, and cuts down the amount from $3 000,000 to $300 000, a saving of $2,700 000. Some account of the retrenchment in the consular service was given in a former letter The saving will reach over a million The legislative judicial and executive bill as now prepared reduces the salary of Congressmen to $4 500, and that of President, after the present term, to the old figure of $25,000 The force of clerks in the House is reduced, and ten per cent. taken off all salaries. The office of Private Secretary to the Speaker, a Republican innovation, is abolished The reductions contemplated in this bill aggregate $5 000,000 The proposition to abolish the useless marine corps has not yet been finally acted upon In time of peace this corps is no more necessary than the fifth wheel to a coach and if it is not abolished entire it will be attached to the Navy Department, and its machinery so curtailed that about $1,000,000 will be saved It the Navy Department alone it is expected to reduce the estimate about $12,000 000

The proposition to reduce the army meets with more opposition than all the rest But the army influence, which has had its own way in legislation for years past, is to some extent broken, in the House at least The people are beginning to feel that they do not care to longer support a standing army upon an extravagant basis which is only used for the accommodation of the carpet bag governments of the South. It begins to be discovered that the people of the South get along a great deal better without this sort of invention The only interests to be served by it are the interests of a few rascally politicians who pin their faith to the administration. The nation is no longer in the humor to support an idle soldiery for the encouragement of such scandalous administrations as those of Governor Ames, of Mississippi, and Kellogg, of Louisiana, and it will emphatically welcome any measure of economy which is designed to relieve it of this burden Probably no standing army in the world is so magnificently and expensively officered, in proportion to its numbers, as ours There is an officer for every five men The House Military Committee, of which General Banning is chairman has just reported an amended bill, which provides that hereafter the general of the army shall receive $10 000 per annum instead of $13 500 as heretofore, the lieutenant general shall receive $8 000, instead of $11 000 as now, major generals $7 500, as now, brigadier generals $5 000, instead of $5 500, chaplains $1 000, instead of $1,500 The salary of all others are left the same as now Mr Holman is in this Congress the watchdog of the Treasury He thinks that the expenses of the present day should not exceed those of war times It is a common criticism that he is so fond of minute details that he is apt to forget great interests but he has a way of illustrating the extravagant tendencies of the day by trivial instances that is very impressive He declares that if Lincoln's household expenses amounted only to $5,000 a year there was no reason why Grant's should foot up to the sum of $21,000, and his whimsical calculation made some years ago, that every boquet brought in from the agricultural or botanical gardens and laid upon a member's desk cost the people $807 was a good example of his method But I have occupied so much space with this subject that the particulars of investigation developments will have to be left for a future letter.

Morton's Mississippi speech still hangs fire It is now over two weeks since he gave us a couple of installments and we have patiently waited for more. Every day the administration papers say "Senator Morton, having recovered his health will resume his great speech to morrow" But "alas! and alack a day, it cannot was," as Artemus Ward used to say It is really too bad about Morton's health The real trouble is, his speech is a failure The public pulse does not vibrate in unison Micawber like, he is waiting for something to turn up It only some negro down South would assassinate a white man, Morton could distort the report to suit his purpose As it is, however, he knows his resolution will be defeated, and he is taking this course to postpone a vote until something favorable transpires.

The latest reports from St. Louis relative to the whiskey ring trials excite new interest in the matter here The conviction of McKee was unexpected in circles friendly to the indicted ones, and the plea of guilty entered by Maguire puts a still more hopeless face upon future proceedings. It need not be longer disguised that the prevailing impression here is that General Babcock's fate will be that of McDonald, Joyce, Avery, and McKee The gossip of the hotels and the lobbies of the Capitol supplement that conclusion by predicting that the President will never permit General Babcock to go to the penitentiary, but will pardon him at once There is also a suspicion that if some potential influences are not brought to bear still further trouble will be given the administration by the implication of other friends and intimates of the White House. President Grant has announced his intention of going to St. Louis to testify in Babcock's behalf, but an effort will be made to have his evidence introduced by desposition For two weeks past stories have been in circulation to the effect that a further unpleasantness between the President and Secretary Bristow has just occurred It is stated on good authority that Grant's manner towards the Secretary in an interview on Wednesday was decidedly fierce. He referred in strong terms to Bristow's prosecution of the whiskey ring and said he understood perfectly well that certain parties near to him, while they pretended to be his friends, were his enemies, and were trying to build themselves up at his expense This would indicate that the President has lost his temper, and an open rupture is sure to come if not before the Cincinnati Convention, at least very soon after

Congress has been busy most of the week discussing the iniquities of Shepherd's District ring the liabilities of the Government for interest due on the bonds issued by the District Board, and the various appropriation measures referred to above Mr Morrison's new tariff anticipated in my letter of two weeks ago was introduced on Monday and is before the country in detail, the full text of the bill having been published. It will pass the House without much change If the monopolists permit it to pass the Republican Senate and it lifts any of the burdens now resting upon trade, and stops the outrageous customs swindles It will rank, even above retrenchment, as one of the most important measures of this Congress LINUS

HARRISBURG LETTER

HARRISBURG Feb 8, 1876

Editor Compiler —On the 1st instant, the House passed on first reading the three local bills for Adams county

The bill to purchase a copy of Purdon's Digest for each member, was after considerable skirmishing defeated —yeas 81, nays 91. Both of your Representatives voted in the negative

The bill to fix the compensation of arbitrators at $2 per day was defeated

On Wednesday the Republicans got up a skirmish in regard to final adjournment, the object evidently being to defeat action on several important bills at this session—the one providing salaries for the Philadelphia Row officers, for instance The Democrats are determined to do the work of the people fairly, honestly, and as expeditiously as possible, and then adjourn. This the Republicans want to prevent, and therefore waste much valuable time by dilatory motions and useless discussion This question of adjournment affords them the opportunity to capture the morning about twice every week. The Democrats, however, on this occasion voted solidly against a resolution fixing a time to adjourn, and were assisted by several fair minded Republicans The resolution was lost by yeas 53 to nays 118

On Friday the finance bill went to a committee of conference, and will doubtless ultimately pass in an acceptable shape

On Monday evening the House passed the resolutions instructing our Senators and requesting our Representatives in Congress to vote for the repeal of the Bankrupt law

Mr. Stahle offered a joint resolution instructing our Senators and requesting our Representatives in Congress to vote and use their best endeavors to secure the passage of a bill introduced by Hon Levi Maish, of Pa, to reimburse citizens of Pennsylvania for losses sustained during the invasion of 1863

On Monday evening the conference committee on the finance bill reported, recommending a few alterations Ordered to be printed.

The bill to allow the shooting of woodcock on the 20th of June passed first reading in the House

Also the bill to reduce the number and salaries of State officers It fixes the Governor's salary at $5 000, Lieut Governor $2 500 Attorney General $3 000 Secretary of Commonwealth $3 000 Auditor General $2,000, Secretary of Internal affairs $2,500 Adjutant General $2 000 and so on, aggregating a large reduction

The finance bill passed both branches to-day the Senate yielding to the House in all essential particulars

BLAINE rehashes the horrors of Andersonville, and Morton spends three days in rehearsing the apocryphal outrages in Mississippi, but neither Blaine nor Morton will convince the people that shameless wrongs have not been committed in the south under the guise of law, and with the full sanction of the Administration. Neither will they bring the country to believe that the late revolution in popular sentiment, by which the power heretofore exercised by the carpet baggers has been wrested from them, is anything save a natural sequence of the outrages perpetrated by the followers of Grant's administration. The protests come not from Democrats, nor from white men alone, but from leading Republicans of both colors, those from the blacks being, if possible the most forcible and convincing They, in common with the whole country, desire peace, and the men who array themselves in opposition to this widely prevailing sentiment, will be swept aside as the chaff before the whirlwind.—Chronicle.

RECORD YOUR DEEDS — The attention of persons holding unrecorded Deeds is directed to the provisions of the Act of Assembly which requires that—

"All deeds and conveyances for real estate in this commonwealth, shall be recorded in the office for Recording Deeds in the county where the lands lie, within six months after the execution of such deeds and conveyances, and every such deed and conveyance not recorded as aforesaid, shall be adjudged FRAUDULENT AND VOID against any subsequent purchaser for a valuable consideration, unless such deeds be recorded before the recording of the deed or conveyance under which such subsequent purchaser or mortgagee shall claim."

This is a very important notice, and those holding unrecorded deeds will see the importance of having them recorded without further delay. Jan 6 tf

ST MARK'S Lutheran church at Hanover has extended a call to Rev Prof D Schindler, of Adrian College, Michigan

The sum of $8 000 has been subscribed towards the stock of the new Town Hall at Hanover, and it will doubtless all be taken

The Hanover Water Company offers to give the borough the use of the water for hydrants at $250 a year

The First National Bank at Hanover will build a handsome banking house where P S Weaver's photograph gallery now stands and Mr Weaver has bought a lot of thirty feet front on Abbottstown street at $1 000, to put up a new building for his use

ABOUT 11 o'clock on Thursday night of last week a coal oil lamp exploded in the Reformed Parsonage at Littlestown The lamp with the wick turned down and burning dimly stood on a chair in the children's room Rev Ault and his wife, with great presence of mind, extinguished the fire, (the chair and bed clothes having caught) and thus prevented what might have been a very serious affair

RAILROAD EXTENSION —I am pleased to see that the people along the "Old Pipe worm" railroad are beginning to talk right, and with considerable earnestness, of the extension of the Hanover Junction Hanover and Gettysburg Railroad to Fairfield Pa to the unfinished or the graded portion of the famous "Tapeworm" road is for west is James Donaldson's Hence the road would be constructed to the town of Fairfield by a route which has been surveyed and from examinations that have been made will cost much less than those who have not given the matter their careful attention may at first suppose

Already nearly three thousand dollars have been subscribed in the town of Fairfield and more than that amount outside Let under all and every circumstance a liberal spirit prevail Let each contribute in proportion to his means and the advantage he may have after the road is made, let unanimity and concert of action prevail, and my word for it the money can be raised and the work made Let the matter speedily be taken in hand and pushed forward with vigor by all residing within six miles of the road Let all go to work then, that can for a better investment than this cannot be entered into Success to the enterprise G

Delight of Nitrous Oxide Gas!

"MAY God Bless you, Dr. Moyston!" is an exclamation of a lady more than sixty years of age, who took the Laughing Gas for the extraction of a number of large teeth. She was one of those nervous, fearful persons who would have preferred being tortured for life with a bad set of teeth than to have submitted to an operation by the old mode of taking out teeth. "I have never felt the least pain!" "Oh, I wish everybody could avail themselves of this system of yours!" This is but one opinion of thousands who would speak with the highest praise of Dr. Moyston's happy way of extracting teeth. Artificial Teeth inserted, Teeth filled. Satisfaction guaranteed. Charges moderate. Office and Residence No. 55 N. FAYETTE STREET, BALTIMORE Md.

PLOUGHS!

THE undersigned is now engaged in manufacturing Ploughs of different patterns, and begs to call the attention of the farming community thereto. Among them he would mention the Improved Wallace Plough, which is one of the most desirable in the market, and not to be excelled for good work and light running. The old Wallace took the premium at the State Fair, and this is an improvement upon that. It is a bar shear, with cutter, and is adapted for two or three horses. He also sells the Improved Bedford or Bloody Run Plough, cast, for two and three horses, likewise a great favorite. Also the Oak Hill Foundry Plough, cast, for two and three horses and a Plough of the same name and make, a regular two horse. Also a Sidehill Plough, cast, for two horses. These Ploughs are made of the best material, and by the best workmen. The mould-boards are made of chilled iron, hard as glass, and are good scourers. All ploughs warranted to give satisfaction, or may be returned. Prices as low as possible. For further information, address

Lonely the home and sad the hours
Since our dear parents are gone,
But oh, a purer home than ours
In heaven is now their own.

Farewell, farewell, our parents dear,
Take rest without your here;
Oh may we meet in heaven above,
Where all is peace and joy and love.

We loved you, yet, no one can tell
How much we loved you and how well;
God loved you too, and he thought best
To take you with Him to rest.

We hear their voice no more on earth,
They are gone to join the heavenly throng,
Where all is peace and joy and love;
Farewell, dearest parents farewell. H. T.

ORDINANCE.

Borough of Gettysburg.

WHEREAS, the health of the inhabitants and the cleanliness of the Borough of Gettysburg, require that the slaughtering or killing of animals for food, by the butchers as a business, should be done beyond the limits of the said Borough:

Therefore be it enacted by the Burgess and Town Council of the Borough of Gettysburg:

1st. That every person is hereby prohibited from slaughtering or killing, or allowing to be slaughtered or killed as a business, any animal or animals for food, on his, or their premises within the corporate limits of the Borough of Gettysburg, under a penalty of twenty-five dollars due for each and every such offence.

2nd. That for every such offence he, she or they so offending shall, on conviction thereof before the Burgess, pay the said fine, together with the costs of prosecution, and in case of neglect or refusal to pay the same forthwith be imprisoned in the county jail for a period of twenty-four hours.

3rd. That this ordinance shall not be so construed as to prevent any persons from slaughtering or killing on their own premises, animals raised for food for their own consumption.

4th. This ordinance shall take effect from and after the first day of April, 1876.

Approved February 8th, 1876.

GRAND JURY REPORT.

TO the Honorable Judges of the Court of Quarter Sessions of the county of Adams and State of Pennsylvania:

We, the members of the Grand Jury, do report that we visited the Jail and found the Sheriff a clever and obliging officer. We find some things very much out of order especially the furnace, which is altogether unfit for use in its present condition, on account of the immense quantity of coal gas which escapes through the heating pipes into the cells, rendering them unhealthy. The bed clothing in the cells is very insufficient, and also the jail yard is not in a proper condition. We also visited the Almshouse and found the Steward a courteous and obliging officer, the rooms of the inmates all in good condition, and the buildings generally in good condition. We find the out-house belonging to the Court-house a perfect nuisance, rendered so in some measure, if not totally, on account of its being open at all times to the public, which it should not be. We would suggest that some proper step be taken in this matter to abate the nuisance.

THIS WILL NOTIFY THE PUBLIC of our intention to put NEW and LOWER PRICES on much of our Stock.

THE YEAR'S CLOSING OUT SALE WILL COMMENCE AT HALF-PAST SIX O'CLOCK, EACH WEEK-DAY MORNING, and CONTINUE UNTIL OUR FALL AND WINTER STOCK IS SOLD.

THE MAIN FACT IS:

We have made up TOO MANY OVERCOATS and SUITS for this year, and to transfer our Stock into Cash needed for preparations for 1876, we will make certain sacrifices which will be apparent ON AND AFTER WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER FIRST, when we shall have gone through our Salesrooms and cut off Profits, and even a part of the cost, from many of our present prices.

To be very exact in stating this matter, as we do not intend that any advertisement or custom of our house shall mislead the public in the least particular, we think it proper to say, that this Mark Down, whilst it applies to

A THOUSAND AND MORE OVERCOATS,
A THOUSAND AND MORE BUSINESS COATS,
HUNDREDS OF DRESS COATS,
SEVERAL THOUSAND VESTS,
SEVERAL THOUSAND PAIRS OF PANTS,

and extends throughout our house, yet there are some lots in which (as they have already been marked at close prices,) we shall make no change. We desire to announce that this is

OUR FINAL AND ONLY MARK DOWN THIS SEASON,

So that NONE NEED WAIT for Lower Prices. The step we take will wonderfully aid those who feel like Economizing.

The Terms of the Sale are the Usual Terms of Our House:

1.—No second or Altered Price—ONE FIXED PRICE.
2.—Cash from All, to warrant Low Prices.
3.—The Contract on our part, to return money, is a part of the bargain in each case (provided goods are returned unworn.)
4.—A Full Guarantee given for each garment.

The Stock we offer is all New, and not "Bought" or "Wholesale" stock, but our own CAREFULLY MADE CLOTHING. It will be remembered that our stock always embraces the Choicest Styles of Substantial Goods, and that Every Size and Shape is provided for both Men and Boys. It will also be borne in mind that there is but ONE OAK HALL, and that is at the corner of SIXTH-SIXTH-SIXTH-SIXTH and MARKET Streets.

Hoping for a visit from each reader, and that our friends will pass this announcement to all their friends in the country,

We are Very Truly,

FARM AND GARDEN.

For the Compiler.

PEACH GROWING.

Mr. Editor:—That fruit growing in this region can be made a most profitable thing, is beyond dispute; but judgment and care are required, just as in the cultivation of any of the grain crops.

In my estimation peach growing is the best paying. But peach trees ought not to be planted as close together as they are by many. They should be set thirty or forty feet apart in the rows, and the rows fifty feet apart. The land may then be plowed and farmed conveniently, year after year as rotation of crops shall demand, (manuring it well and keeping it in good condition of course,) and trees will not only bear profitably, but be healthy and vigorous, and become long-lived, lasting twenty and even thirty years. But planting very close, as has been the custom of late, is a mistake, as the branches soon grow together, which prevents farming of the land, and the trees consequently die early. I throw out this single hint because I think it is needed. P.

STRAW AS MANURE FOR WHEAT.—During a recent visit to Western New York a number of farmers asked our opinion as to the value of straw as a covering for their wheat fields the coming winter. The interest which such a question implies is gratifying. It shows that the poor wheat crops of the past two or three years have taught farmers that something is the matter, and if wheat growing is to be continued something must be done to make better crops. Stable manure put over the wheat in the fall is known to be a valuable protector; but does it save the crop chiefly as a mulch or from its manurial properties? It is not easy to get stable manure enough to cover the large wheat fields which many farmers sow, and some of the best farmers draw their barnyard manure on corn and potato ground in the spring and have little left for top dressing in the fall. They, however, have straw in plenty, and if it can be made available for immediate use their fields can be well and cheaply protected.

Our own observation and experience shows that straw is of little value for this purpose. Wheat is often winter killed from exposure to bleak winds, and it seems as if a covering even of straw would not be beneficial. Practically, however, it is probable that poverty of soil is the true difficulty. We have seen wheat fields exposed to the bleakest winds and most severe freezing where the crop came out all right because the soil was rich, while on poorer soil in protected situations the wheat was an entire failure. The plant on a poor soil does not seem to have much to live for, and gives up the ghost to insects, cold weather and other evils about as readily as thoroughly discouraged men and women do when attacked by disease. Poor land is subject to many fatalities which crops on rich soil escape. Wheat was made to endure the cold of winter, and when properly grown it has means of protecting itself from its severity. With plenty of appropriate food it will manage to wrap itself with a mantle of its leaves and brave the severest storms of winter. We have repeatedly seen wheat on rich soil pass through the winter successfully, while on poor soil, with less exposure, it has been almost ruined by winter killing. Commercial fertilizers, drilled in with wheat, have the same effect, while more straw has not.

Straw is not by any means a cheap manure. Its value for selling may be low, but even then it is worth far more as feed or for bedding than as manure in its unfermented state. If it can be sold at ten to fifteen dollars a ton, as was done in most of our large cities a year or two ago selling straw is not a bad mode of disposing of it, provided better modes are purchased in its stead. But always save enough for bedding and as an absorbent of manures that would otherwise be lost. Thus used, the soil will increase in fertility, so that very soon winter grain will be well fed and strong enough to maintain its vitality without protection during the severest winter.—Moore's Rural New Yorker.

EFFECTS OF TREES ON CLOVER.—Some species of trees seem to be specially injurious to vegetation beneath their shade, and of these the butternut, hickories, or walnuts are conspicuous examples. The fact is frequently noted that clover, corn and hoed crops are especially liable to injury. We have often seen clover killed outright around a butternut tree for a distance equal to the extent of its branches or roots. At the same time clover will thrive under apple, pear or other fruit trees where the ground is not unsuitable and the failure under butternut and walnut trees suggests the query whether it is caused by the roots of one kind of trees exhausting the moisture near the surface, while the the others draw it from the subsoil, or whether it may not result from the direct injurious effects of the dripping of water from the leaves and branches. Many farmers believe that butternut and walnut leaves poison the soil for certain kinds of crops. In order to test this question we are instituting experiments, taking butternut leaves and spreading them on a few feet square of clover to note the effect next summer. If the leaves are really poisonous to vegetation the effect will be seen away from the trees as well as near them. Our guess is that the butternut roots exhaust the subsoil moisture worse than the roots of other trees. Butternut makes a poor shade, and this tends to keep the land dryer. We noticed last fall that young clover of last season's growth grew quite well under a butternut tree. The bad effect seemed not to be manifested till the second year, by which time the clover roots should strike the subsoil.

This subject is well worthy of attention and investigation. Clover is so important and almost necessary as a renovating crop, that any thing which detracts from its growth is a great loss, and it is highly important we should know wherein the injury consists. We are entirely convinced that fields kept mainly for tillage should be cumbered with few or no trees and especially that those kinds most injurious to tilled crops or clover should be removed. They are as much worse than rocks in a field as a continued injury is worse than an inconvenience. By making the soil less productive, trees in cultivated fields become one of the worst obstacles to good and successful farming.—Rural New Yorker.

THEORY OF COOKING.—At the recent fifth annual convention of the New York State Dairymen's Association, held at Norwich, Prof. J. P. Roberts, of Cornell University, read a lengthy essay on "Breeds and Feed," from which we condense the following ideas:

He opposed feeding cold food, and claimed that 70 deg. was as cold as it should be given. For warming this cold food, he claimed that extra food was required, and that coal was much cheaper. Assuming that coal was worth $7 per ton, hay $14, bran $20, and corn $70 cents per bushel, the professor claims that the entire cost of raising the food from 35 deg. to 70 deg. by coal, in food, was as $7.00 is to $37.45; that is, that it required thirty-seven dollars' worth of food to do as much as might have been done by seven dollars worth of coal. He also stated that a good cow, giving thirty pounds of milk per day in winter, would consume 25 pounds of hay, 2½ pounds of bran, 7½ pounds of cornmeal and 60 pounds of water per each 1,200 pounds of her weight. These statements were sharply criticised by Harris Lewis and other practical men.

A CHEAP ICE HOUSE.—A neighbor of mine, writes a correspondent of a New York journal, has an inclosure about six feet square in the clear and six feet high. The walls are formed of old refuse timbers thrown closely together, with no regard to form or comeliness. The roof is made of hemlock boards. The entire cost of this building did not exceed five dollars, and, practically considered, it is a success; not ambitious of containing thirty-five loads of ice, but simply five loads. Ten years this little unpretentious house has been used for ice, and never yet dishonored a draft upon its crystal deposit. About six inches of sawdust was spread upon the ground floor, and in packing, a space of about nine inches was left between the ice and the walls of the building, for sawdust, which was spread upon the top of the ice, and the thing was fixed. The three main principles observed here will always insure a supply of ice, viz: good ventilation, good drainage, and plenty of sawdust. With these rules adhered to, a corner of any old pen shed will prove quite efficient in preserving ice.

CUT WORMS.—A correspondent gives the following directions: Spirits of turpentine poured upon seed corn before planting, and thoroughly mixed by stirring, so that all the seeds shall be impregnated with it, is a specific for the terrible ravages of the cut worm. I have never known it to fail in one instance. My own practice has been to put one quart of turpentine to a bushel of corn, or in that proportion, which is sufficient, and I have always thought that corn came up two or three days earlier when thus treated. Besides, the scent of the turpentine, which can be detected several weeks after planting, aids much in keeping crows at a distance.

MANURE AND FRUIT TREES.—The Gardener's Monthly (by all odds the best authority on the question in Pennsylvania) says: "A fruit tree never suffers from too much manure if the roots are healthy. If a tree seems to suffer after a heavy manuring, it was only that it was in a bad way before. Of course, if one were to empty a cesspool, a cartload of fresh lime, or some other inordinate mass of food under a tree it would suffer; but our meaning is, that no amount of manure that would be found of benefit to any regular garden will be otherwise than beneficial to a fruit tree, if the roots be healthy."

ALL young stock, colts, calves and lambs, should have meal or grain the first winter, for this is the time to lay the foundation for future excellence and profit. For calves and lambs there is no feed that pays better than shorts and bran,—we mean the old-fashioned shorts, or middlings,—with this we may profitably mix shelled corn for calves, and oats for lambs. For colts nothing can take the place of oats.

THE HOUSEKEEPER.

LEMONS WHOLESOME.—When people feel the need of an acid, if they would only let vinegar alone, and use lemons or apples, they would feel as well satisfied and receive no injury. A suggestion may not come amiss as to a good plan, when lemons are cheap in the market, to make good lemon syrup. Press your hand on the lemon, and roll it back and forth on the table to make it squeeze more easily; then press the juice into a bowl or tumbler—never into a tin; strain out all the seeds, as they give a bad taste. Remove all the pulp from the peels, and boil in water—a pint for a dozen pulps—to extract the acid. A few minutes boiling is enough; then strain the water with the juice of the lemon; put a pound of white sugar to a pint of the juice; boil ten minutes, bottle it, and your lemonade is ready. Put a tablespoonful or two of this lemon syrup in a glass of water, and you have a cooling, healthful drink.

TREASURY DEPARTMENT WHITEWASH.—The recipe for whitewashing sent out by the Lighthouse Board of the Treasury Department has been found by experience to answer on wood, brick and stone nearly as well as oil paint, and is much cheaper. Slake a half bushel of unslacked lime with boiling water, keeping it covered during the process. Strain it, and add a peck of salt dissolved in warm water; three pounds of ground rice put in boiling water and boiled to a thin paste; one half pound powdered Spanish whiting, and a pound of clear glue dissolved in warm water; mix these well together, and let the mixture stand for several days. Keep the wash thus prepared in a kettle or portable furnace, and when used put it on as hot as possible with either painters' or whitewash brushes.

HOW TO KEEP A BROOM IN ORDER.—"A penny saved is twopence earned" Do not set the broom away with the brush end down, for in a little time it becomes one-sided, and unfit to sweep with. Either turn it over and stand it up on the handle, or, better still, screw an islet in the end and hang it up.

A CHEAP AND STRONG GLUE.—To make a glue which will resist fire, put a handful of quick lime in four ounces of linseed oil, and boil to a good thickness; then spread on tin plates in the shade. It will become exceedingly hard, but may be easily dissolved over the fire and used as ordinary glue.

LOOSENING GLASS STOPPERS IN BOTTLES.—If a glass stopper won't move, hold the neck of the bottle to a flame, or warm it by taking two turns of a string and see-sawing it. The heat engendered expands the neck of the bottle before a corresponding expansion reaches the stopper.

SAVE THE FUEL.—The surplus heat wasted from a common stove will if conducted through a drum into another room, warm the room as much as a stove would, and compel the fuel to to do double the duty and give double results.

COFFEE AS A DISINFECTANT.—Roasted coffee is one of the most powerful means, not only of rendering animal and vegetable effluvia innocuous, but, it is said, of actually destroying them.

KEYSTONE HOUSE,

CHAMBERSBURG ST., GETTYSBURG, PA.

By J. & M. W. Klunk.

THE undersigned have leased the Keystone Hotel, on Chambersburg street, half a square from the Diamond, in Gettysburg, Pa., and intend to keep it in the best style, for the accommodation of the local and traveling public. They promise entire satisfaction to all who may patronize them. The table will always have the best of the market, and the bar the best of liquors; the chambers will be found large, clean and inviting.

Large stabling in care of an attentive ostler, attached to the Hotel.

Give the "Keystone" a call. Charges reasonable and accommodations good.

CITY HOTEL,

FREDERICK CITY, MD.

F. B. CARLIN, Proprietor.

THIS popular and well-known Hotel, having been enlarged and thoroughly renovated, offers many advantages to the traveling public. The exterior of the Hotel, which is now four stories, presents a beautiful appearance, and will compare favorably with any structure of the kind in the State. The entire arrangements of the Hotel are in keeping with its outward appearance, it is supplied with every modern improvement and convenience, and has been newly furnished throughout at a very heavy cost. No pains or expense will be omitted to promote the comfort of guests.

The enviable reputation the Hotel has acquired since the undersigned has taken charge of it, furnishes the most satisfactory evidence of his ability to please all who may favor him with their patronage. There is attached to the Hotel a spacious Billiard Room, newly fitted up, a Barber Shop, Bath House, &c.

Attentive and polite servants will always be in attendance to wait upon guests during the day or at any hour of the night.

There has recently been added to the main building an additional structure that will give him thirty-two more rooms, so that the capacity of the Hotel will be equal to any in the State outside of Baltimore.

Respectfully, FRANK B. CARLIN.

RE-OPENED.

THE subscriber respectfully informs the public that he has leased the above named and well known Hotel, situated on Centre Square, and about one hundred yards from the Railroad Depot, where he is prepared to receive and entertain the local and traveling public in a manner he ventures to say will be altogether satisfactory. His out-door arrangements are also complete, having a good Stable, good hostler and a careful porter.

Mercantile Agents will always find at this Hotel a good and convenient room in which to exhibit their goods. This establishment is located in the centre of business and stands unrivaled.

Katalysine Water will always be on hand, free of charge, for boarders.

The undersigned declines making a multiplicity of promises, but cordially invites citizens and travelers to call and judge for themselves. J. R. DONNELL, Propr.

NEW OXFORD,

GIVES full satisfaction to all who have examined it, and is now being arranged to a number of Windows in this county. Persons who have examined its construction and operation, have no hesitation in asserting that it is an improvement which should be arranged to the windows in every house in the country, and needs but to be seen in order to be appreciated.

The days for the construction of windows, so that the bolts, &c., must be taken loose each time that the sash are taken from the frame, are gone by. No person will build a house and have the frames made in the old manner when he can have them made with this new arrangement and at but little more cost than the old kind of frame.

The essential parts in this arrangement are all covered with Patents, and are entirely owned and held by me; and I challenge the world TO PRODUCE ITS EQUAL.

INVALIDS.

Don't Despair!

Thousands have found relief, and thousands will turn to this Medicine after exhausting their purses and patience in search of health. Giddiness of the head, dullness of the mind, fetid breath, coated tongue, loss of appetite, pains and weakness in the stomach, enlargement of the liver, yellowness of the skin, constant fever and thirst, with a total distaste for business, amusements, or any kind of employment. FAHRNEY'S PANACEA, if taken and persevered in for a few days, will remove this whole class of symptoms. The fluids of the body become pure, and mind clear, the stomach strengthened, and the tongue clean, the appetite improved, and the whole system benefited that disease, in bad weather, is less liable to afflict you.

Dr. P. FAHRNEY'S

Blood Cleanser or Panacea.

As a medicine for children, the Panacea is in every way calculated to take the place of the endless variety of drugs which are annually sold for that purpose, and which are often very injurious. A medicine which possesses the qualities of a cathartic as well as a mild alterative, and which is capable of arresting disease without the least injury to the child, is of incalculable value to every mother. As a cathartic it is very effective, yet it does not, if given in proper quantities, cause nausea or distress in the stomach or bowels. It is very pleasant to the taste, which is a very important feature as a medicine for children. As a preventive of disease it is unprecedented, as it acts directly upon the digestive organs and the blood. In all scrofulous diseases, it is the most effective medicine ever offered to the public; and, if given regularly and perseveringly, those eruptive diseases so common to children may be entirely eradicated.

Prepared by P. Fahrney's Bros. & Co., Waynesboro' Pa., and Dr. P. FAHRNEY, 74 North Dearborn street, Chicago. For sale by wholesale and retail dealers, and by A. D. BUEHLER and J. M. HUBER Gettysburg.

MASON & HAMLIN CABINET ORGANS.

UNEQUALED judged officially UNAPPROACHED in capacity and excellence by any others. Awarded

THREE HIGHEST MEDALS

AND DIPLOMA OF HONOR AT

VIENNA, 1873; PARIS, 1867.

ONLY American Organs ever awarded any medal in Europe, or which present such extraordinary excellence as to command a wide sale there.

ALWAYS awarded highest premiums at Industrial Expositions, in America as well as Europe. Out of hundreds there have not been six in all where any other organs have been preferred.

BEST Declared by Eminent Musicians, in both hemispheres, to be unrivaled. See TESTIMONIAL CIRCULAR, with opinions of more than One Thousand (sent free).

INSIST on having a Mason & Hamlin. Do not take any other. Dealers get LARGER COMMISSIONS for selling inferior organs, and for this reason often try very hard to sell something else.

NEW STYLES with most important improvements ever made. New Solo and Combination Stops. Superb Etagere and other Cases of new designs.

PIANO-HARP CABINET ORGAN An exquisite combination of these instruments.

EASY PAYMENTS. Organs sold for cash; or for monthly or quarterly payments; or rented until rent pays for the organ.
